

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

Medicalis Creates Physician-Provider-Payer Radiology Network in Minnesota

Kitchener, Ontario, Canada – January 22, 2008

Medicalis[®] Corporation, a leading provider of clinical decision support and workflow solutions, has created an integrated network for radiology ordering and decision support in the state of Minnesota. Working with imaging providers and physician groups, Medicalis has deployed a web-based network that applies evidence-based clinical guidelines to physician orders and facilitates real-time access to their local radiologists.

The structured ordering process and clinical decision support of the Medicalis network produces clear, appropriate requisitions which reduce unnecessary testing and ensure greater patient safety. Three major payers in the state are now participating in the network and consider network participation by physicians and providers as an alternative to traditional phone-based radiology benefits management (RBM) programs.

More than twenty organizations have already joined the network and offer this alternative consultation process to their physicians. Physicians, imaging providers and health plans now have common access to a cohesive solution that improves ordering efficiency and quality, while ensuring patient safety and care throughout the process.

“The network in Minnesota is a great example of a community-based quality initiative where Minnesota radiologists support Minnesota physicians.” said Mike Fisher, Executive Vice President of Business Development for Medicalis, “The active involvement of all stakeholders in the state made this possible and we look forward to replicating this model in other states.”
